BARON MUNCK ON FINLAND'S WOES

Leader Finnish Exiles' Committee.

He Advises His Compatriots to Settle in the West.

Were It Not for the United States, Finns' Best Hope Would Be Death.

66 W ERE it not for the United States every loyal Finn could pray for nothing better than death.

In these words did Baron Munck of Helsingfors, Finland, express himself to a Tribune representative at the Kenyon last night. Baron Munck, who is one of the leading members of the Finnish Exiles' committee, which maintains a bureau in New York for the purpose of giving support to all those driven out of their native land by the brutal oppression of the Russians, is making a tour of the whole country. With him is Dr. J. Hundhausen, a member of the German Reichstag, from the eastern district of Silesia. As his constituency is full of Polish exiles, who emigrate over the border to escape the Russian rule, he was able to confirm everything said by the baron.

Come West, He Advises.

'We, the committee of the Society of Finnish Exiles in America, are advising all those of our countrymen who are able to, to come out West. It is out here that we feel that the principles of liberty which we despair of obtain-ing in our own country as long as she is under the heel of the Russian bear, most fully developed."

Will Make Good Citizens.

'I have seen much written in your Thave seen much written in your papers, and have heard much said of late against the tide of immigration which the freedom and great institutions of the United States are drawing over here," he continued, "but I tell you, as I would I could impress on every American, that in our country-men you are getting men who will be as good and true citizens as you will find. They appreciate their haven of refuge. Before they come here, while refuge. Before they come here, while they are still in mid-ocean, they have already learnt to love the country, and each year they live here they learn to appreciate her more. Don't despise the Finns, because they are going to make

Fullest corroboration was given by

FIFTH BURGLARY OF WEEK REPORTED

Police Think the Same Gang Is Responsible for the Last Depredation.

HE fifth robbery of the week was committed yesterday afternoon, when some robbers entered the residence of Mrs. Hardy, 517 First street, between the hours of of 2:30 and 5 p. m., and ransacked the house from cellar to garret, taking everything in the line of jewlery or money that they could lay their hands on.

The robbers forced an entrance by cutting a pantry screen. In the house they adopted the same method of procedure as has been used in the four preceding robberies and everything points to the fact that the same gang is doing all the work. The police re-ceived some side information on the robbery, which looks very reasonable, but if true, it upsest all their present suppositions and clues.

At the time of the robbery Mrs. Hardy was down town and, on returning, she found the blinds and window. of the house open, whereas she had left them closed. On entering she found paper and clothes scattered through the halls and in all the rooms. Every drawer, box, case, chest, trunk and drawer had been pulled out of place and its contents scattered about on the floor. Mrs. Hardy was not able to give any estimate as to the amount taken last night.

Chief Lynch gave out the following statement on the robbery: "This business is certainly getting critical. We don't understand it at all, but are rather inclined to believe that one gang is doing all the work. If the reports which we have received today are cor-rect the question is only made doubly perplexing for us."

No streets were then paved, and there were but few sidewalks. After a residence of eight years in Denver, Dr. Utter re-turns to find Salt Lake improving in many directions. In the old days Dr. Utter was wont to say that Salt Lake was the most beautiful place that he knew anything about—and he has traveled much— and yesterday he had not changed his mind.

During the years he has made his home in Denver, Dr. Utter has been paster of the Unitarian church at that place, and the church has pros with the prosperity of the city years ago they paid off a debt of $10-000 which had been hanging over the church for fifteen years, and now the church is free from debt and everything is in a most satisfactory condition. The old pastor of the church here said he was more than glad to see the progress the Unitarian movement was making in this city and delighted to learn that the congregation had at last secured a church of its own. So far as my observation goes, such disturbances do not usually end in a strictly legal manner. I think that the Western Federation of Miners is a criminal organization in this sense, that I am sure a large proportion of its membership would shield the persons guilty of that dynamiting outrage. And this is the reason for the best fields for the church of its own. The committee will meet at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, and go to Oyster Bay August 3. After the notification ceremonies the committee will e the guest of the President.

Mr. Synder, who is one of Utah's most nthusiastic Republicans, feels deeply grateful to the members of the State delegation who urged his name for membership on the notification committee and he looks forward to his Eastern trip with pleasure. State Chairman Frank J. Cannon has been interviewed at St. Louis, in which he says he is for Gormon for President. The other delegates from Utah are divided between Hearst and Parker, or are non-committal.

On account of the real estate celebration there was little doing in the way of real estate sales during the first half of the week, while a gratifying revival was noted following the hollday. The building of homes continues lively. Crop conditions are execulent in nearly every part of the State, the outlook for a bountiful yield of sugar beets being especially flattering.

Money is pientiful and in comparatively light demand, and the supply of money seeking investment promises to be somewhat augmented by the payment of divi dends on many stocks during July. It won't stain a piece of the finest silk and when a vag is brought in they just dampen his clothes with the juice and bill the vermin. By this method Chief Browning keeps his cells comparatively free from vermin and contagious diseases. HOTEL PROPRIETRESS IN POLICE COURT

The case against Mrs. E. H. The morning session was spent empaneling the following jurymen: Joe Mellin, W. Reed, James Brown, Willis Rogers and J. Johnson.

In the afternoon evidence taking was begun. The city furnished witness after witness whose powerful testimony was directed against the defendant with telling effect. The defendant made numerous but ineffectual attempts to have the case dismissed on technicalities, but the city had prepared its case too carefully, and all such objections were overruled. The city, in opening the case, said that they would prove that self-confessed prostitutes resorted to the St. Elmo hotel for lewd purposes known to the proprietress, and that drunken women and prostitutes have frequently been arrested out of that house.

Mrs. Bartlett was visibly affected, and tears frequently came to her eyes as the trial progressed. It was stated on good authority that she had not slept for three nights, and one would not question the assertion after seeing her careworn countenance

Two of his water colors, scenes from the Fete de Vaugirard, have just been purchased for the Musee Carnavalet, an honor which all young artists seek, as it gives them a recognition not otherwise obtainable. The story of the purchase of Mr. Young's pictures is of interest. The director of the Musee was in search of water colors, and spoke to a German-American artist about some proposed purchases. The artist was not plensed with the work shown, and raid he knew of a young American artist who was doing much better. Upon solicitation, samples of Mr. Young's work were secured, and were so much admired by the director of the Musee that he decided to purchase two of them. Mr. Young's many friends here will be glad to learn of this bit of news.

When seen last evening, Chief Lynch gave the following interesting account of Walden's robbery, capture and con-(Utah fession: "About three days ago, a bunch of crooks entered an Ogden store and carried off, along with other things, a reore of pocket knives. The police score of pocket knives. The police started after the fellows and traced them down to the willows. The patrol was called and every vagrant in the vicinity was picked up and taken to the station. When Walden was marched some knives were found, but they were not the ones missing. The police knew he had been stealing and so they locked him up awaiting further developments. "Friday afternoon Chief Browning

"Friday afternoon Chief Browning came down from Ogden on some special business and incidentally happened to tell us the foregoing story. Detective Shannon remarked that it might be the fellow we were looking for and so we furnished Browning with a description furnished Browning with a description of Walden Capt Browning took it along and on arriving home gave it to Detective Pender. He hunted up Walden and asked him straight out. When did you break into that store in Salt Lake? Walden came out with the whole story and made a flat confession. "He claims that he was drunk when he committed the robbery. At about 11 o'clock that night he was stumbling around, when he noticed Ferro's store

Il o'clock that night he was stumbling around, when he noticed Ferro's store all lighted up. He went around to the back door, and feeling hungry he concluded to break in and get something to eat. He pried open the door and went in. Cheese, crackers and root beer constituted his menu, while a large watermelon served to round up his meal. Before leaving he pocketed a dozen knives and 40 cents in change. On sobering up Walden became frightened and rode the rods to Ogden. When found and searched he only had four knives left out of the dozen. He confessed to having given one away and the supposition is that the others dropped out of his pockets while he was hanging on to the rods."

was hanging on to the rods."

When seen last night Walden explained his cause for confessing thus:
"I just couldn't stand the strain. I am not a hardened criminal and would never had committed the crime had I been sober. I want to explain this to the court and then I will plead guilty. I expect to get off easy considering the nature and circumstances attending the affair. The amount taken shows that affair. the theft was not intentional on my
